PRIMOGENITURE LAW ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Lawyers Believe That the Supreme Court of Missouri Made a Clerical Error.

LEGISLATURE MAY REMEDY IT.

Persons Making Wills Are Warned Not to Use the Phrase "Heirs of the Body."

Primogeniture laws upon the statutes of Missouri, attention to which was called by Joseph G. Holliday in a communication to The Republic, have occasioned considerable comment among members of the bar.

Persons making wills are warned not to use the phrase "helrs of the body" unless it be intended that the property bequeathed to a certain heir shall descend to the eldest son of that heir, to the exclusion of other children. This is a revival of the old Eng-

Upon a principle similar to that laid down by Blackstone, in which he says that the "King can do no wrong," attorneys are averse to criticising the Supreme Court of the State, but, disregarding ethics, it is admitted by the legal fraternity that the court made a clerical error when, in a recent decision, it was made possible for a testator in Missouri to so entail an estate that it would descend through the lines of eldest

"Our next Legislature should change the "Our next Legislature should change the law," said Joseph G. Holliday yesterday, "and meanwhile persons making wills should avoid the use of the term 'heirs of the body when referring to the heirs and assigns of any one beneficiary in the will." Use of the phrase "heirs of the body" is common in drawing wills, and it has had no legal significance more than meaning assigns of a beneficiary, until the point came up which Mr. Holliday states has the effect of re-establishing the old primogeniture laws.

of re-establishing the old primogeniture laws
Attorneys believe that the Supreme Court in passing upon the question of descent did not intend to revive an old statute which "was swept from our statute books by the revision of 1845," and that the error in the last decision governing the law of conveyance in wills was entirely clerical.

As it stands the use of the phrase "heirs of the body," according to the old common law construction, means that if John Doe leaves property to a son or daughter and their heirs of the body, such property after the death of the body, such property after the death of the beneficiary descends to the eldest son. It permits a rich man to entail his property after the fashion of English noblemen, who recognize one heir, the eldest son, to whom descends the lands and principal part of an estate, while the younger children are left with comparatively little.

"If the question should happen to come

"If the question should happen to come up before the Legislature changes the law," said an attorney yesterday, "I believe that the Supreme Court would reverse itself and decide against primogeniture. This law has no place in our institutions, and I am sure the statutes of Missouri, which seem to hear out the proposition, technically, would be construed differently if the point were rade an issue."

The question was not discussed at the meeting of the Bar Association last night, but it came up in an informal way afterwards. It was stated that the laws governing estates are perhaps the most diminate of the point raised over primogeniture may be readily disposed of.

POTTER PALMER'S ESTATE MAY BE WORTH $15,000,000.

Palmer House Valued at $7,500,000 and His Lake Shore Drive Residence Is Worth a Million.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL. Chicago, May 10. - Because his realty holdings consisted of so many distinct pieces of property, the current market value of which has not been ascertained, not even a reliable approximate estimate is made thus far of the wealth of Potter Palmer. The figures proposed by conservative men run all the way from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, the average being $12,000,000 to $15,000,000.

the way from $10,000,000 to $30,000,000, the average being $12,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Several years ago Mr. Palmer told an intimate friend his income was $1,000 a day. It has considerably increased since that time. His most valuable single holding was the l'almer House and the mercantile stores therein. Some time ago the Swift special commission placed a valuation of $5,033,000 on this property. The estate's income from this source is now said to be $300,000, which would indicate a market value of $7,500,000 for the property.

Mr. Palmer's income was almost entirely in the form of rents. Within the territory beween the Chicago River and Tweifth street, on and east of State street, and in another district north of the river, on the Lake Shore drive and contiguous thereto, Mr. Palmer owned more than half a hundred valuable pieces of property, much of which is improved with fine residences.

The Lake Shore drive residence, where Mr. Palmer lived and died, is estimated to be worth $1,000,000. The other North Side property probably is worth on the open market $2,000,000.

Only a few days ago Mr. Palmer filed a schedule of personal property aggregating $1,117,385, the largest of its kind ever filed in Cook County.

Cook County.

"I believe," said James J. Gray, member of the Board of Assessors, "that $15.0 0.00 would be a fair estimate of the Palmer es-

The members of the family would give out no statement as to the amount of life insurance carried by Mr. Palmer, but it is said to have been much less than was popularly supposed.

SPONGES RARE AND QUEER. STEAMER CONCORDIA

Unique Collection, Some From Mediterranean.

Sponges and coral of rare and peculiar formation are being displayed at Garrison and Washington avenue in a collection which represents twenty-five years of work and a considerable expenditure of money.

Pharmacist F. E. Whitcomb, who ow the collection from Mediterranean, Cuban and Indian waters, takes special pride in one specimen fished out of the Mediterone specimen fished out of the Mediter-ranean. This sponge was found attached to a fragment of Roman pottery lying in the hold of a Roman galley that must have been sunk centuries ago. The sponge thrived on the big chunk of pottery, and grew to large sroportions. The strangest part of the specimen is that two distinct va-rieties of sponge grew on different parts of the pottery. One looks like the sheep's wool variety, while the other is of a sliken tex-ture.

"Sponges are getting rarer every year."
said Mr. Whitcomb, "and the price has been advancing. Rock Island sponges which a few years ago sold at $1.25 now cost as much as $5.75. Cuban sponges bring in $3.75 now, whereas they used to sell at 75 cents. Reef sponges are the cheapest. Some sponges can be obtained only from one firm in the wide world, and that is a wholesale St. Louis drug house."

The One Perfect Refrigerator,

The "Odorless."

Know the secret of refrigeration. Keeping the air on the go-fanning the food, so to speak. The ice is the fan. Warm air rises; cold air sinks. The "Odorless" does the work wonderfully well, because the cold air enters the provision chamber at the bottom and forces the warm sir out at the top-FORCES IT OUT, NOT BACK ONTO THE ICE AGAIN. This leaves the driest sort of air for circulation among the foods. Dry cold air keeps food from getting sticky and mucky. There are thousands of less costly refrigerators (and we have some of them), but they won't be bought by people who appreciate cleanliness or have the right idea of economy.

The "Odorless" can be bought nowhere else in St. Louis but here.

Not a living soul was found aboard. The boat was fully equipped, well engined and had apparently been fitted out for a long coast cruise. She would have carried at least four of a crew, and had sleeping apartments for half a dozen others, so that probably at least eight or nine persons were aboard.

lly, and Captain Gott of the New England does not believe she would have stayed affoat another two hours.

The steamer had evidently fitted out on Puget Sound, for there were Seattle labels on some of the boxes, and she had probably coaled at Nanaimo or Union.

There were two rifles and two shet gune, which would indicate that the passengers were either mine prospectors or timber hunters who had been searching along the coast. There was some clothing scattered about, and under pleces of displaced machinery, but nothing to show the names of people who had been abourd.

The vessel was apparently new shid may have been built at some one of the cannery posts along the coast. The only name like hers in the coast-shipping registers is that of the Concord, a smaller vessel, whose home port is St. Michael, Alaska. Captain Gott got the derelict into a secret cove at the northern end of Vancouver Island, where she now lies.

London, May 10 .- The hopes of the philatelists of a special coronation stamp issue have been dashed by the announcement that does not intend to either print a coronation set or issue a special stamp for common use in the United Kingdom and the colonies, but will adhere to the regular penny postal rate. The plan for a common stamp has been discussed, but is not considered desirable.

Flowers for Hospitals.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL

Freeport, L. I., May 10.—Scores of school children connected with charitable societies and their teachers are busy after school hours these bright spring days gathering violets, which are to be found in abundance by the roadside, in woods and other places this season. The flowers are sent to hospitals and other institutions, where they add cheer to the life of many unfortunates.
